“The bank of Dave” recently made headlines when a North West business man, frustrated by the struggle to obtain small business loans set up his own scheme. In the eyes of some this was a flagrant disregard of financial regulations, to others a welcome challenge to the unfair monopoly of the established players in the financial services industry, For many years, Tim Presswood has headed up one of the largest Credit Unions in the UK, and through a recent ICF fellowship has researched the growth of various alternative currency co-operatives. Tim combines a clear commitment to social justice with a creative and imaginative approach to presentation for what promises to be a fascinating evening — all are welcome; to assist with catering please book via the icf website or through the contacts below.

About ICF

ICF is a national, ecumenical, membership organisation, which was founded in 1877 and developed through the work of the famous World War 1 chaplain, Geoffrey Studdert Kennedy - Woodbine Willie. It seeks to encourage individuals to deepen their understanding of God's purpose in the world of work, and to help local churches engage with workplace and other contemporary issues. We seek to provide support by:

- combining the practical experience and theological reflections of our members and extensive network of friends and associates
- helping our members and others to live out their faith at their work
- producing worship and church-life resources that highlight and explore workplace issues
- acting as a prophetic and challenging resource point for the churches in their ministry to all those at work.
